

POLAR ESCAPE

save the last penguin

The sinking of an oil tanker in Antarctica discharges a huge amount of oil into the sea. The penguins, caught on an iceberg, try to reach land by avoiding contact with water, that is, by jumping on floating ice sheets, defending themselves from the onslaught of seals and sea lions. The first penguin to reach land wins.

It is not just a game of competition but also of cooperation, as each penguin shares his ice sheet. Another novelty is the random element (penguin steps, or accidents such as seal and sea lion assaults). It is not represented by the usual dice but by a web app, as the frequency of accidents is parameterized on the number of players and the level of risk chosen.
